Laura Tejada focuses her practice on trademark and copyright law. She represents and counsels a diverse range of corporate clients on intellectual property matters. Laura handles worldwide trademark portfolios for large consumer products companies including representing such clients before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and Trademark Trial and Appeals Board.

Prior to joining the firm, Laura was an associate in the New York City office of an international law firm where she focused on trademark enforcement and prosecution, intellectual property litigation, and complex commercial litigation and also maintained an active pro bono practice in which she represented indigent clients in education, immigration, and asylum matters including successfully obtaining asylum for a political refugee. Previously, Laura worked as a summer associate and then an associate in the New York City office of an international law firm where her practice included securities litigation, corporate governance, and complex commercial litigation.

While attending law school, Laura was a member of the Georgetown Law Journal. She also served as a legal intern to Judge Nicholas Figueroa in the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Besides her law practice, Laura is a director of a 501(c)3 charity which focuses on providing social and monetary support to families of children diagnosed with cancer.
