

Insights: Publications

Walking the Fine Line of Fair Use: The Second Circuit's Decision in Fox News v. TVEyes

Intellectual Property Strategist

April 1, 2018

Written by Crystal C. Genteman

Only a small fraction of television news broadcasts are made available online. For a party to monitor and view all news coverage of an event, it would essentially have to watch and record all news broadcasts 24/7. That's exactly what media-monitoring service TVEyes did. There was no dispute that TVEyes had copied Fox News's content. Instead, the issue was whether TVEyes's service constituted fair use.

Related People

Crystal C. Genteman

Senior Associate

Atlanta, GA

t 404.685.6779

cgenteman@kilpatricktownsend.com