The 2017-18 term of the U.S. Supreme Court signaled a noticeable tilt to the right on many decisions of fundamental importance. The recent resignation of Justice Anthony Kennedy and the impending Senate confirmation hearings promise to bring high political drama in the coming months. Join our distinguished panel of experts for a discussion of the most significant decisions of the term, including recent rulings on presidential power, redistricting, religious and LGBTQ rights, fourth amendment protections, and other issues, as well as a discussion of the contributions of Justice Kennedy and the prospect of what his absence could mean for future decisions on civil rights and reproductive freedom.
